Photo: After unexpectedly losing his job at a local Quarry, Jaya's husband became depressed and abusive, making life difficult for Jaya and their three children. Jaya started doing odd jobs to try and feed her children and keep them in school. Despite her family's own difficult situation, she still had the heart to help others by sharing the little food she had. One day Jaya was introduced to Bangalore City Mission's self-help groups and has not looked back since. Through the program she learnt to sew and today runs her own small store at a local market. She continues to help those less fortunate than herself.
