Photo: Lillian Nakibombo's parents passed away when she was young and she was sent to live with her grandparents. While there, she was sexually assaulted by her cousin's boyfriend and when she found out she was pregnant her school expelled her. Her family also threw her out of the home and she was left alone with no one to turn to.

Miriam was taken in by Wakisa Ministries and cared for through her pregnancy. She also received trauma counselling and spiritual support. Together with the other girls at the Centre, Miriam was supported through school and taught important life skills. She recently graduated top of her class and plans to go to university to study law.
