Bhavya is a young mother who almost gave up on life after her first marriage ended in divorce due to domestic violence and her second husband suddenly passed away in a car accident. Bhavya started a floristry business to try and support her family and it was not successful. Bhavya was losing hope. Her family and the community told her she was bringing bad luck to her village. Bangalore City Missions (BCM) community development team visited her regularly and introduced her to their vocational training program. Since joining the vocational training program at BCM Bhavya's life has changed. Not only has she learned sewing skills, she has formed lifelong friendships with the other women at BCM. Bhavya has now completed her training and is working at a local garment factory earning enough to support her family. Bhavya's success has been an encouragement to other women in her community who have since joined the vocational training program at BCM.
